CP Day 5 - Alvaiazere

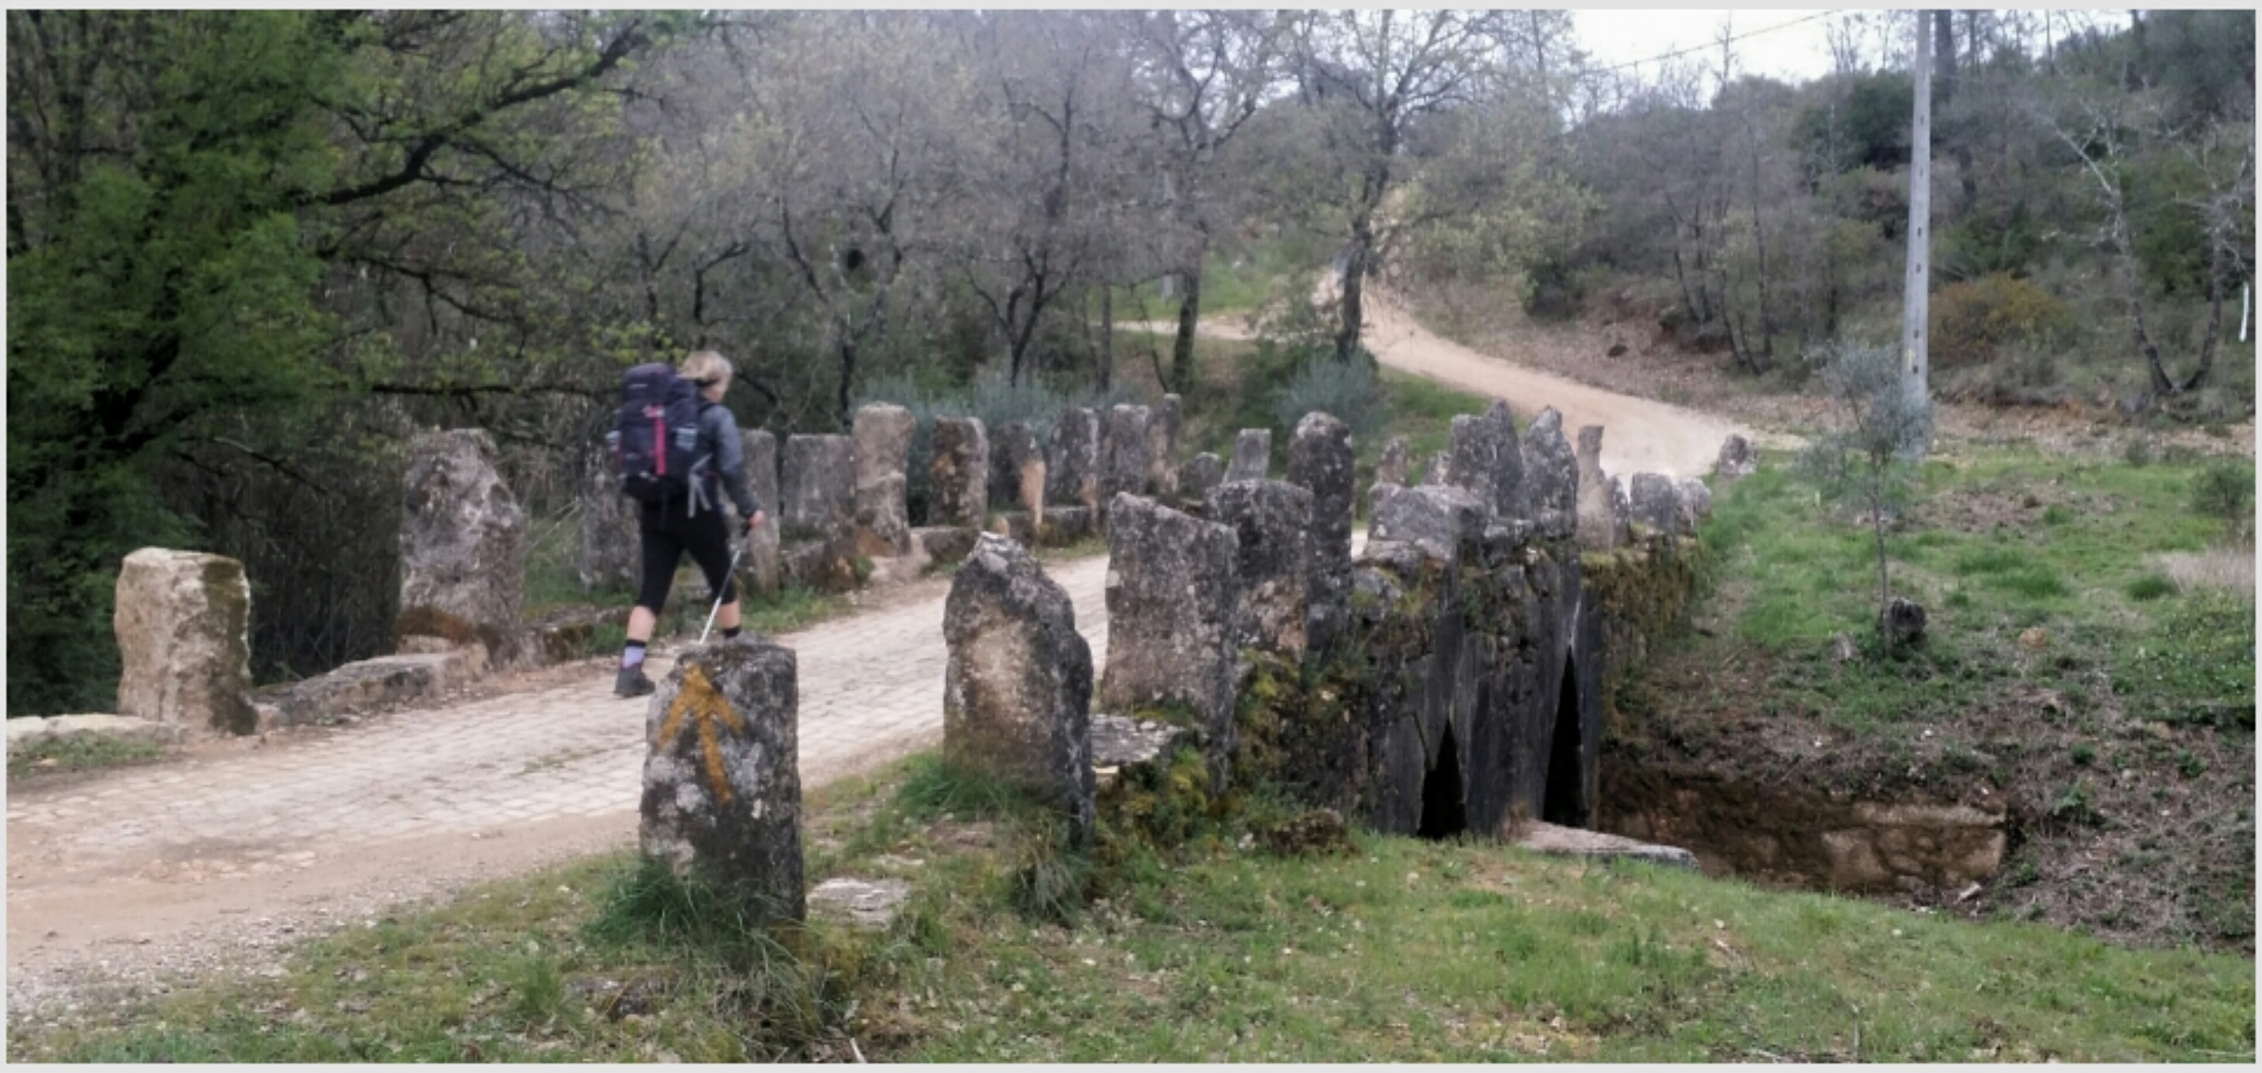

27 - 28 Mar 2016

Leaving at Tomar-o'clock....which we'd by now figured out as 1 hour forward (the clocks having gone back yday - Easter Sunday)

Very pastoral start to the day - lots of greenery, wild flowers, and medieval stone bridges

I quote liked this photo

Stone-walled villages festooned with bright flowers....oh and 2 of the friendliest dogs we'd met (amongst the very many unhappy and vicious ones behind locked gates). However, they then proceeded to tail us out of town. So we had to return them costing us 3 'puppy' kilometres!

Towering cork trees and triffid-like flowers gave the walk an other - worldly feel

Jackie's 'Miracle Taxi', literally in the middle of nowhere l, after she'd been wailing for one for many kilometres. Chris & I walked the final 5lm into town, but both Jackie & the driver seemed perfectly happy!

First we toasted our arrival....then we toasted the ceremonial embossing of our pilgrim passports, then we toasted again for good luck!
