CP Day 25 - Santiago (am)

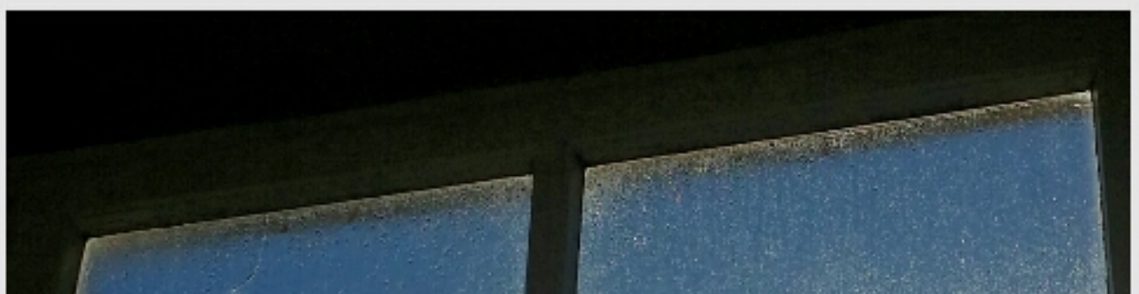

17 Apr 2016

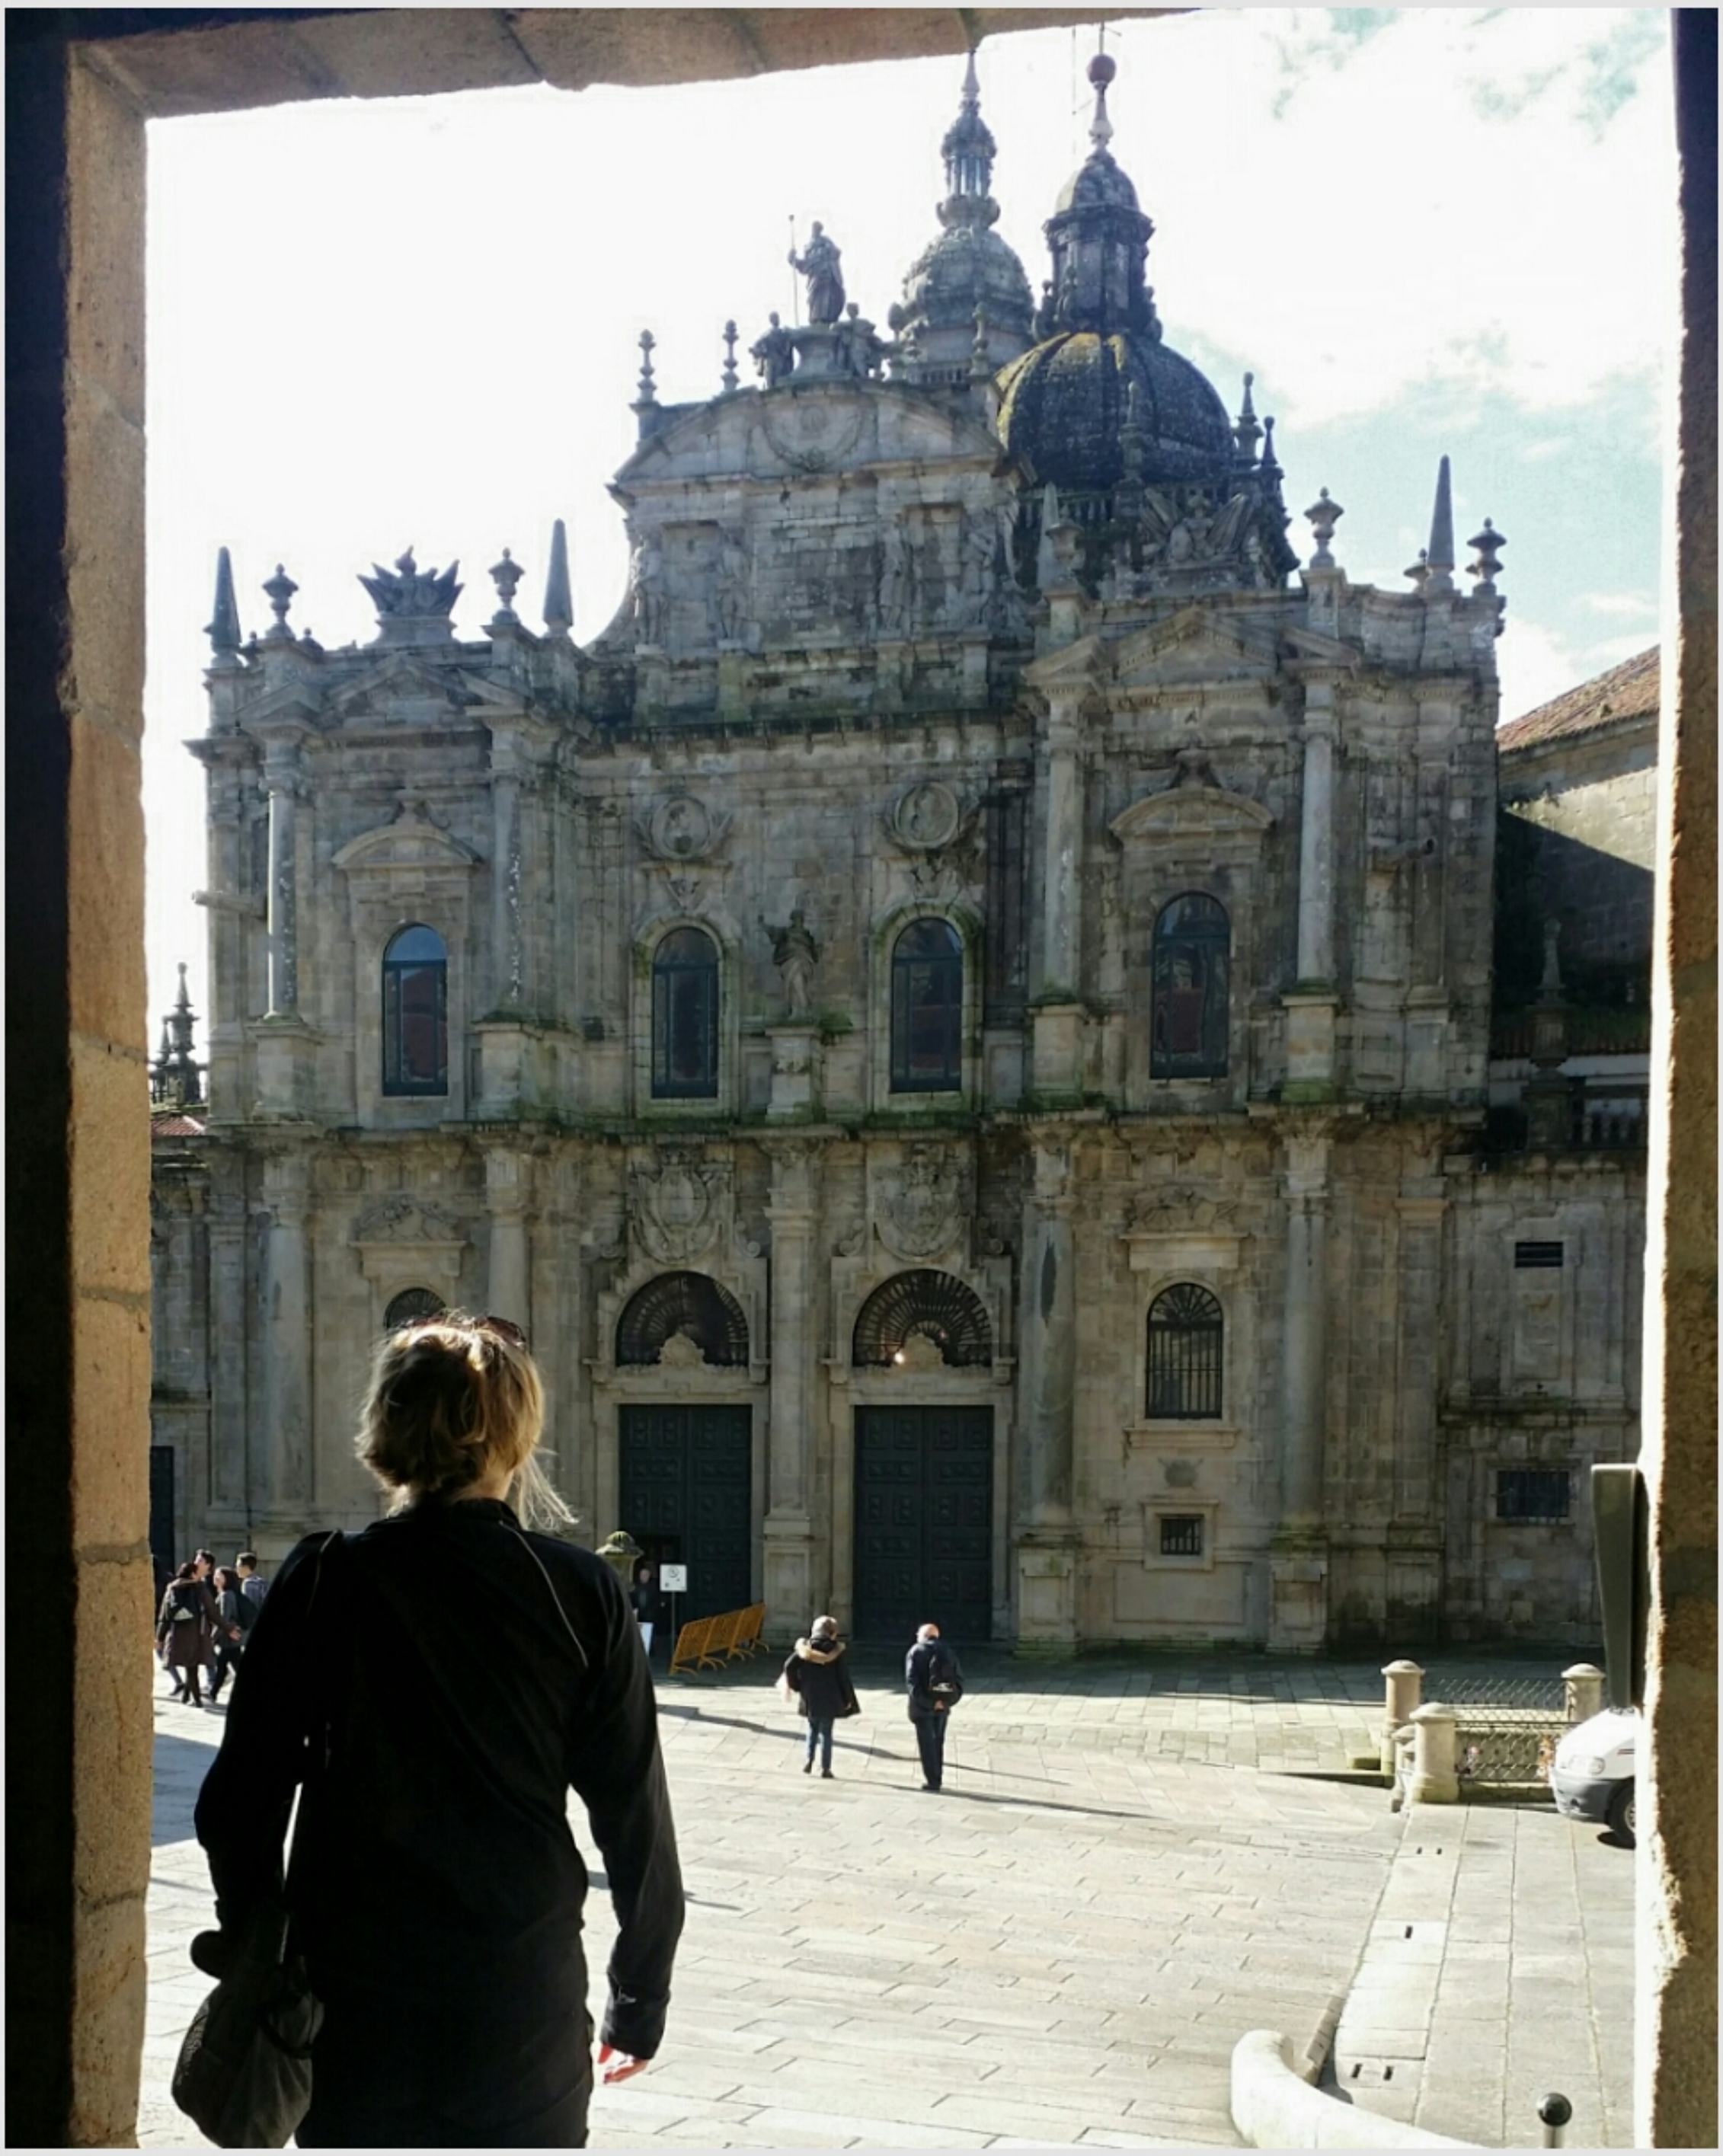

Sunshine - it does exist after all! We were woken by it pouring through our Windows - so we did have a nice view after all!
Bumped into Clara again at breakfast downstairs who happened to be staying here as well.

And a rather spectacular view from the front door of our Pension - the Hospedaría San Martín Pinario, slap bang opposite the Cathedral.

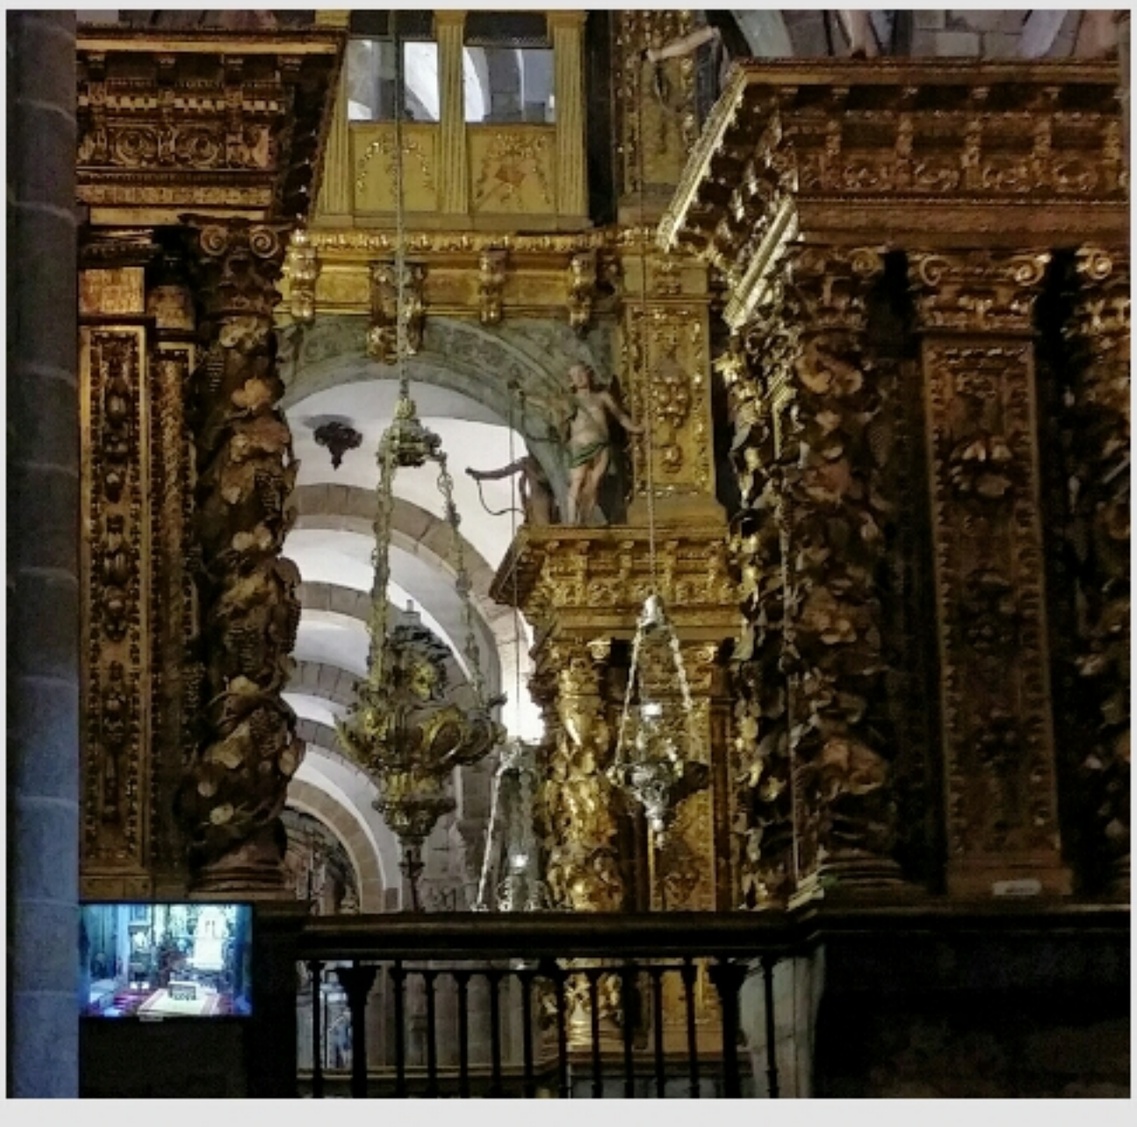

Another view of where we're staying [top photo] and various others of around Santiago on a bright Sunday morning.

It's quite difficult to take a bad picture of this city, whether the sun is shining or not.

Pilgrim's Mass at noon was jam-packed. We missed out on the reserved pilgrim spots as 'somebody' needed a last minute pee & coffee...I was less than amused!
No botafumeiro either - I'm destined never to see it in action...might have to walk another Camino?

Final view of St James, the bloke we've been walking to see for the past 3 weeks.

Looking out from the steps of the Cathedral..and then, backpacks on again and a short (20 min) walk to the station - off to A Coruña, our final stop.
